

Hansa is a company that focuses on “support of global bland marketing”.They offer this support for Japanese listed companies attempting to expand their business into South-eastAsia. Thailand can be a markedly distinct and confusing business location for Japanese companies. Within this context, Hansa focuses on correctly arranging such business projects. For this design we propose strict detailing, whilst using local rough materials such as a local brick. The connection between the rough material and the strict detailing expresses Hansa’s role in Thailand
